

Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny

Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny is a 2023 American action adventure film directed by James Mangold, who co-wrote it with David Koepp and the writing team of Jez and John-Henry Butterworth. It is the fifth and final installment in the Indiana Jones film series and the sequel to Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull (2008). It stars Harrison Ford, John Rhys-Davies, and Karen Allen reprising their roles as Indiana Jones, Sallah, and Marion Ravenwood, respectively, while new cast members include Phoebe Waller-Bridge, Antonio Banderas, Toby Jones, Boyd Holbrook, Ethann Isidore, and Mads Mikkelsen. Set in 1969, the film follows Indy and his estranged goddaughter, Helena, who are trying to locate a powerful artifact before Dr. Jürgen Voller, a Nazi-turned-NASA scientist, who plans to use it to alter the outcome of World War II.

Dial of Destiny is the only film in the series that is neither directed by Steven Spielberg nor conceived by George Lucas, with both serving as executive producers instead. It is also the first film in the series not to be distributed by Paramount Pictures, following Walt Disney Studios' acquisition of Lucasfilm and film rights for future sequels. Paramount retains the distribution rights to the first four films and a residual associate credit.

Plans for a fifth Indiana Jones film date back to the late 1970s, when a deal was made with Paramount to produce four sequels to Raiders of the Lost Ark (1981). Lucas began researching potential plot devices for a fifth film in 2008, and Koepp was eventually hired to write the film in 2016. A release date was set for 2019, which was then delayed several times due to rewrites and the COVID-19 pandemic. In 2018, Jonathan Kasdan replaced Koepp and eventually left the project. Spielberg was originally set to direct but stepped down in 2020, with Mangold taking his place. Filming began in June 2021 in various locations including the United Kingdom, Italy, and Morocco, wrapping in February 2022. Longtime franchise composer John Williams returned to compose and conduct the film's score, for which he was nominated for Best Original Score at the 96th Academy Awards and Best Score Soundtrack for Visual Media at the 66th Annual Grammy Awards, with Williams winning a Grammy for Best Instrumental Composition for "Helena's Theme".

Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny premiered out of competition at the 76th Cannes Film Festival on May 18, 2023, and was theatrically released in the United States on June 30, by Walt Disney Studios Motion Pictures. Critics praised the film for Ford's performance, noting that it helped bring the film some final bits of "cinematic treasure" but criticized the film for not being as thrilling as earlier installments. It grossed $384 million worldwide, becoming a box office bomb due to a lack of wide audience appeal and an expensive overall budget, with estimated losses of $143 million for Disney.

Plot

In 1944, Nazis capture Indiana Jones and Oxford archaeologist Basil Shaw as they attempt to retrieve the Lance of Longinus from a castle in the French Alps. Astrophysicist Jürgen Voller informs his superiors the Lance is fake, but he has found half of Archimedes' Dial, an Antikythera mechanism built by the ancient Syracusan mathematician Archimedes which reveals time fissures, thereby allowing for possible time travel. Indy escapes onto a Berlin-bound train filled with looted antiquities and frees Basil. He obtains the piece of the Dial, and the two escape the train just before Allied forces derail it.

In 1969, Indy is retiring from Hunter College in New York City. Marion has recently left him and filed for legal separation due to both parties depression over their son Mutt being killed in the Vietnam War. Indy's goddaughter, archaeologist Helena Shaw, unexpectedly visits and wants to research the Dial. Indy warns that her late father, Basil, became obsessed with studying the Dial before relinquishing it to Indy to destroy, which he never did.

As Indy and Helena retrieve the Dial half from the college archives, Voller's accomplices attack them. The CIA assists Voller, now working for NASA as "Dr. Schmidt". Helena, revealed as an antiquities smuggler, absconds with the Dial to put it up for auction on the black market. Indy is framed for two colleagues' murders, forcing him to escape through the Apollo 11 moon landing parade, then an anti-war protest.

Indy seeks out his old friend Sallah, now a New York cab driver who helps him flee the country after surmising that Helena will likely sell the Dial in Tangier. At a Tangier hotel, Indy disrupts Helena's illegal private auction, but Voller and his henchmen arrive and steal the artifact. Indy, Helena, and her teen sidekick Teddy Kumar chase them through the streets in a tuk-tuk. The CIA intercepts Voller after the U.S. government disavows him for going rogue, but his cohorts murder the agents and steal their helicopter.

Indy, Helena and Teddy trail Voller to Greece and team up with Indy's old friend Renaldo, a professional diver. Guided by Basil's research, they dive to an ancient Aegean Sea shipwreck and retrieve a "graphikos" tablet containing directions to the Dial's other half. Voller arrives and murders Renaldo and all of his crew. Indy's group escapes and heads to Sicily, pursued by Voller.

Inside the Ear of Dionysius cavern, Indy and Helena find Archimedes' tomb, the Dial's second half, and a 20th century wristwatch on Archimedes' skeletal arm. Voller appears and captures Indy, wounding him. Helena and Teddy escape and chase Voller. After reassembling the Dial, Voller reveals his plans to travel back to 1939 to assassinate Adolf Hitler and help lead Germany to victory in World War II without repeating all the mistakes Hitler made. At an airfield, Voller activates the Dial and locates a time fissure in the sky. Indy is held captive on Voller's stolen plane while Helena stows away through its landing gear and Teddy follows them in another plane.

Whilst approaching the fissure, Indy realizes that continental drift could have altered the timeline coordinates. Rather than 1939, the group instead arrives at the Siege of Syracuse in 212 BC. The warring armies shoot down Voller's plane, believing it to be a dragon. Indy and Helena parachute out just before the plane crashes, killing everyone else aboard, while Teddy lands safely. Archimedes finds Voller's body and wristwatch in the wreckage. He gives Indy the Dial but keeps the watch. Indy and Helena learn that Archimedes created the Dial to bring users from the future through fissures that lead only to 212 BC. As the fissure begins to collapse, Indy wants to remain behind, feeling he has nothing left to return to. Helena, fearing a time paradox and unwilling to give up on him, knocks Indy unconscious.

Back in the present, a recovering Indy awakens in his apartment and reunites with Helena, Teddy, Sallah and Marion. Marion and Indy reconcile.

Cast

- Harrison Ford as Dr. Henry "Indiana" Jones, Jr., a world-renowned globe-trotting archaeologist and college professor.^{[10][11]}
 - Anthony Ingruber as young Indiana Jones (1944). Ingruber had portrayed a younger version of Ford's character William Jones in The Age of Adaline (2015), serving as the on-set body double before Ford's de-aged likeness and voice was inserted over Ingruber's using CGI for brief parts of the 1944 scenes of Dial of Destiny. Ingruber also portrays a hotel guest attending Helena's auction.
- Phoebe Waller-Bridge as Helena Shaw,^[12] Indy's goddaughter.^[10] The filmmakers described the character as "slippery, charming, the girl next door, a grifter," a "pioneer in ethical accounting" and similar to comedic characters with "machine-gun" dialogue akin to those of Ben Hecht's plays.^[13] She is the daughter of Indy's old friend and colleague, Basil Shaw.^[10] Holly Lawton portrays a young Helena.
- Mads Mikkelsen as Dr. Jürgen Voller,^[14] a Sociopathic German scientist, astrophysicist^[15] and former Nazi during World War II who has been hired by NASA under the name "Dr. Schmidt" to run the Apollo Moon landing program, while using CIA assets for his own gain.^[16] Mikkelsen felt that Voller is a man who would like to "correct" some mistakes of the past with the film's MacGuffin to make the world "a much better place to live in," matching wits against Indy in a race to retrieve the artifact.^[13]
- Antonio Banderas as Renaldo,^[17] an old friend of Indy who operates as an expert frogman.^[18] Banderas claimed that his character is a rogue who is "a good guy who dies for Indiana Jones". He enjoyed working with Ford, Mangold and Steven Spielberg, who co-produced The Mask of Zorro (1998), one of his previous films.^[19] Banderas also pointed out that his role as Renaldo veers more into a cameo appearance.^[18]

- John Rhys-Davies as Sallah, Indy's old friend who aided in finding the Ark of the Covenant in 1936 and the Holy Grail in 1938. Sallah and his family have since immigrated to New York City with Indy's assistance. He now works as a cab driver.
- Toby Jones as Basil Shaw, an Oxford professor of archaeology, ally of Indy from his days in World War II, and Helena's father, who was obsessed with the Dial.^[20]
- Boyd Holbrook as Klaber, Voller's nefarious and trigger-happy right-hand man in 1969.^[21] Holbrook described Klaber as Voller's lapdog, "and a very crazy one at that."^[13]
- Ethann Isidore as Teddy Kumar, Helena's young Moroccan sidekick in Tangier.^[22]
- Karen Allen as Marion Ravenwood, Indy's estranged wife, who aided in finding the Ark of the Covenant in 1936 and the Crystal Skull of Akator in 1957.^[23]
- Shaunette Renée Wilson as Agent Mason, a CIA agent assigned to work for Voller.
- Thomas Kretschmann as Colonel Weber, a Nazi for whom Voller works in 1944.^[14]
- Olivier Richters as Hauke,^[23] a henchman of Voller.^{[24][25]} Richters takes on the role of a heavybuilt henchman that opposes Indiana, a role that was preceded by Pat Roach in the first two films, and Igor Jijikine in Kingdom of the Crystal Skull.
- Mark Killeen as Pontimus, a soldier from 212 BC during the Siege of Syracuse.^[25]
- Nasser Memarzia as Archimedes, a brilliant scientist from 212 BC Syracuse and inventor of the Antikythera ("Dial of Destiny").
- Martin McDougall as Durkin, a CIA agent working with Voller.
- Alaa Safi as Aziz Rahim, the son of a Moroccan mobster, who was previously engaged to Helena Shaw.
- Anna Francolini as Mandy, one of Indiana Jones' colleagues at Hunter College.

Production

Development

In 1979, George Lucas and Steven Spielberg made a deal with Paramount Pictures for five Indiana Jones films.^[26] In April 2008, Harrison Ford said he would return as Indiana Jones for a fifth film if it does not take another twenty years to develop, referring to the long development of Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull (2008), which was released a month later.^[27] The film introduced the character Mutt Williams, played by Shia LaBeouf. Writer/producer Lucas suggested an idea to make Williams the lead character in a fifth film,^[28] but later decided against this.^[29] Lucas said that Ford's age would not be an issue in making another film, saying, "it's not like he's an old man. He's incredibly agile; he looks even better than he did 20 years ago."^[28]

Lucas began researching potential plot devices for another film in 2008, and stated that Spielberg was open to directing it, as he had done for the previous films.^{[30][31]} Explaining the process for each film, Ford said, "We come to some basic agreement and then George goes away for a long time and works on it. Then Steven and I get it in some form, some embryonic form. Then if we like it we start working with George on it and at some point down the line it's ready and we do it."^[32] Lucas stressed the importance of having a MacGuffin that is supernatural but still grounded in reality with an archaeological or historical background, saying, "you can't just make something up, like a time machine."^[33] Speaking about the previous film and the franchise's future, Lucas said, "we still have the issues about the direction we'd like to take. I'm in the future; Steven's in the past. He's trying to drag it back to the way they were, I'm trying to push it to a whole different place. So, still we have a sort of tension."^[34] Later in 2008, Ford stated that Lucas's concept for the fifth film was "crazy but great".^[35] In November 2010, Ford said that Lucas was still working on the project.^[36] In July 2012, producer Frank Marshall stated that the project had no writer and said about its progress, "I don't know if it's definitely not happening, but it's not up and running."^[37]

In October 2012, The Walt Disney Company acquired Lucasfilm, giving Disney ownership rights to the Indiana Jones intellectual property.^{[38][39]} In December 2013, The Walt Disney Studios purchased the distribution and marketing rights to future Indiana Jones films from Paramount, with the latter studio retaining the distribution rights to the first four films and receiving "financial participation" for any additional films as well as an "in association with" credit in the film's billing.^{[1][2]} The fifth film would become the first in the series to be co-produced by Walt Disney Pictures and Lucasfilm.^[40] With the 2012 acquisition, Lucas passed Indiana Jones 5 to new Lucasfilm president Kathleen Kennedy.^{[41][42]} Lucasfilm planned to focus on the Star Wars franchise before working on a fifth Indiana Jones film.^{[43][44][45]}

In May 2015, Kennedy confirmed that Lucasfilm would eventually make another Indiana Jones film.^[46] Kingdom of the Crystal Skull ended positively for Indiana Jones, with his marriage to Marion Ravenwood. However, Ford did not necessarily view the film as a definitive ending for Jones, wishing to make one more film that could expand the character and conclude his journey.^[47] Ford felt that Crystal Skull "ended in kind of a suspended animation. There was not a real strong feeling of the conclusion or the closure that I always hoped for."^[48] According to Kennedy, "we all felt that if we could conclude the series with one more movie, given the fact that Harrison was so excited to try to do another one, we should do it."^[49] Kennedy, Spielberg and Ford had discussed a couple of story ideas by the end of 2015.^[50]

Pre-production

In March 2016, Disney announced that the fifth film would be released on July 19, 2019, with Ford reprising his role. Spielberg would direct the film, with Kennedy and Marshall as producers.^[51] In April 2016, Marshall said the film was in early pre-production.^[52] A MacGuffin had been chosen for the film,^[53] and work on the script began a few months later,^{[54][55]} with David Koepp as the screenwriter.^[56] The story was conceived by Koepp and Spielberg. Koepp had previously written several other Spielberg films, including Kingdom of the Crystal Skull.^[57] It was initially reported that Lucas would not be involved in the project,^[51] although Spielberg later said that Lucas would serve as an executive producer: "Of course I would never make an Indiana Jones film without George Lucas. That would be insane."^[58] Later in 2016, it was announced that Lucas would have no involvement,^[59] with Marshall stating two years later that "life changes and we're moving on. He moved on."^[60]

In 2017, the film's release date was pushed back to 2020, as Spielberg was busy working on Ready Player One (2018) and The Post (2017).^[61] Koepp said "we've got a script we're mostly happy with."^[62] Spielberg set Indiana Jones 5 as his next film, with production set to begin in the UK in April 2019.^[63] However, filming was pushed back as a final script had yet to be approved.^[64] In early 2018, Lucasfilm met with screenwriters Scott Beck and Bryan Woods for an "open canvas talk" including the Indiana Jones and Star Wars franchises. Beck stated that they had considered writing the next Indiana Jones installment, but that ultimately he and Woods were more interested in establishing an original franchise.^[65] Marshall said that a lot of people had pitched ideas for the film.^[60] Jonathan Kasdan was eventually hired to replace Koepp in mid-2018,^{[64][66]} and a new release date was set for 2021.^[67]

Kasdan had departed the project by May 2019, and it was rumored that writer Dan Fogelman would take over.^[68] In September 2019, Koepp announced that he had re-joined the production as writer, stating that the filmmakers had "a good idea this time."^[69] Koepp ultimately wrote two versions of the film, but neither were approved.^{[70][71]} He said that efforts to produce the film had failed because of disagreement between Spielberg, Ford, and Disney regarding the script.^[72]

In February 2020, Spielberg stepped down as director, as he wanted to pass the film series to a new filmmaker for a fresh perspective.^[73] Kennedy later said that Spielberg "was kind of off and on" about directing the project,^[49] although he did remain as a hands-on producer.^[73] James Mangold was confirmed as director in May 2020, when he began work on a new script.^{[74][75]} He had previously offered Ford a role in his film Ford v Ferrari (2019) and the two also worked together on The Call of the Wild (2020), which Mangold produced. As a result of this relationship, Ford suggested that Spielberg and Kennedy hire Mangold as director.^{[13][76]} He is the first person besides Spielberg to direct a film in the series.^[77]

Koepp departed the project again after Spielberg stepped down,^[72] saying it "seemed like the right time to let Jim have his own take on it and have his own person or himself write it."^[78] Mangold had considered turning down the director position, as Lucasfilm wanted filming to begin in about six months to meet the 2021 release date. However, Mangold wanted more time so he could refine the script. He eventually signed on to the project after the COVID-19 pandemic pushed back the release date, giving him the time he wanted.^[79] The pandemic had also shut down pre-production on Mangold's film about singer Bob Dylan.^[80]

Mangold wrote the new screenplay with Jez and John-Henry Butterworth, who worked with him previously on Ford v Ferrari,^[81] over the course of six to eight months.^[80] Mangold said, "I wanted to really retool the existing script pretty aggressively, almost entirely."^[82] Koepp received credit alongside Mangold and the Butterworths for his earlier work.^[83] Among the previous films in the series, Mangold cited the first entry, Raiders of the Lost Ark (1981), as his biggest inspiration while making Dial of Destiny.^{[79][84]} He considered Raiders his favorite film in the series, and said "you go to the original because that's where the standard was set."^[85]

Mangold conceived the film's time-travel element and its use of the Antikythera mechanism as the MacGuffin.^{[23][86]} To suit the story, artistic liberty was taken with the film's dial, giving it the ability to detect time fissures.^[23] Mangold considered time travel on par with the previous films: "It's no more of a wild swing in my mind than ghouls flying out of a box and melting people's heads through the sheer power of dark angels, or a 700-year-old knight existing in a cave for perpetuity. These are all beyond the scope of all physical belief."^[87] According to Mangold, the earlier draft by Koepp featured a MacGuffin that was "just another relic with power, similar to the relics we had seen," with no emotional connection to Jones.^[76]

James Mangold, seen in 2017, directed and co-wrote the film

A fragment of the real Antikythera mechanism, which serves as the film's MacGuffin

Multiple versions of the film's dial would be created by the prop department for different scenes.^[88] Although Greek inventor Archimedes is presented in the film as the Antikythera's creator, it is unclear whether that is true in reality.^{[23][89][90]}

Earlier films had featured Nazis as the antagonists, and Mangold and the Butterworths were inspired by Operation Paperclip as a way of reincorporating them for Dial of Destiny.^[91] Mangold considered Nazi Germany for the film's time-traveling final act, with Jones attempting to stop Voller's plan. However, as this idea was developed further, Mangold considered it too predictable. He also found that it lacked emotional resonance for Jones and played out like a spy film, prompting him to choose the Siege of Syracuse instead.^{[87][92]} The Butterworths suggested the idea to end the film with Jones and Marion discussing their emotional pain, a callback to a similar conversation in Raiders.^[87]

Mangold consulted with Lucas and Spielberg,^[93] who served as executive producers.^[14] As the script was being written, Mangold would send pages to the duo for input.^[86] Recalling advice that Spielberg offered, Mangold said, "It's a movie that's a trailer from beginning to end — always be moving."^[49]

Casting

Despite Ford's age, Marshall and Spielberg ruled out the possibility of recasting his character.^{[94][95][96]} Ford said, "I'm Indiana Jones. When I'm gone, he's gone."^[97] Spielberg also said Jones would not be killed off during the events of the film.^[98] Likewise, Mangold never considered killing off the character.^[99] Ford was paid $10–12 million for his involvement.^[100]

In April 2021, Phoebe Waller-Bridge, Mads Mikkelsen and Thomas Kretschmann were cast in undisclosed roles.^{[101][102][103]} Boyd Holbrook and Shaunette Renée Wilson were added the next month.^[104] Holbrook previously co-starred in Mangold's film Logan (2017),^[105] in which he also portrayed a second-in-command villain; this made him initially hesitant to accept the similar role of Klaber.^[106] Wilson was cast without auditioning, after a meeting with Mangold.^[107] She felt that her character's government connections fit into the story in a similar way to how the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the CIA recruited black agents to infiltrate the Black Panther Party in the 1960s.^{[13][20][49]} In July 2021, Antonio Banderas was cast in the film,^[108] portraying an ally to Indiana Jones.^[19] Ethann Isidore was cast as Teddy Kumar, marking his film debut.^{[23][109]}

Waller-Bridge described her character as "a mystery and a wonder", and Mangold referred the actress to Barbara Stanwyck's performance as Jean Harrington in The Lady Eve (1941) as a key reference point.^{[110][80]} Mangold and the Butterworths wrote the role specifically for Waller-Bridge, inspired by Karen Allen's performance as Marion Ravenwood in Raiders of the Lost Ark.^[76] Waller-Bridge performed many of her own stunts.^[111]

Mikkelsen said the script was "everything I wished it to be".^[112] His character was partly inspired by the Nazi scientists involved in the NASA,^[113] including Wernher von Braun.^[21] Like most villainous characters he has played throughout his career, Mikkelsen described Voller as a "misunderstood person".^[114] He also described his character as restrained: "We tried to avoid the cliché of the German or the Nazi with the extreme accent and the extreme madness. We wanted him to be a man who kind of blended in once he moved to America because he's predominantly a scientist".^[23]

John Rhys-Davies reprised his role of Sallah for the first time since Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade (1989).^{[115][116][117]} Allen also expressed interest in reprising her role as Marion, noting in 2011 that she and Jones were married in the previous film "so it would be difficult, I think, to move forward without her".^[118] Allen's return was kept a secret in the years leading up to the film's premiere; she said "whenever anyone asked me if I was in the film or not, I had to come up with something to say, like, 'I could tell you, but then I'd have to kill you.'" Her scene was shot in a day and a half,^[119] with the use of a grey wig.^[120] Allen was happy to reprise the character, although she wished she could have had a larger role as part of the film's adventure.^[121] Spielberg's version of the film would have featured Marion in more scenes with Jones.^{[119][120]} Jim Broadbent expressed a willingness to reprise his role as Charles Stanforth from Kingdom of the Crystal Skull, but ultimately did not return.^[122]

Following the release of Crystal Skull, LaBeouf criticized the film and Spielberg, although Mangold said this did not factor into Mutt's absence in Dial of Destiny,^[87] saying "there's only so many people you can edge into a picture".^[123] He further said about Mutt, "I didn't think his whole thing worked that well in the previous film."^[87] As in the earlier films, Mangold wanted to instead capture "that wonderful energy between Indy and an intrepid female character".^[123] Mangold kept his options open about Mutt still being alive and simply off-screen, although he said "the reality is you want the story to focus on the characters that are in the picture. And so saying someone's out wandering off in the periphery seems sadder purgatory than actually making them a story point in the film and using their character's existence as a tremendous source of drama for some of our lead characters."^[124] Mutt was also absent from Koepp's original draft.^[62]

Filming

Although Crystal Skull was largely shot in the U.S., Marshall said that the fifth film would return to a global range of filming locations like the earlier films.^[60] Mangold was opposed to using the StageCraft virtual production technology developed by Industrial Light & Magic (ILM) for Lucasfilm's The Mandalorian (2019–present), wanting to rely mainly on practical effects.^[125] Because of pandemic quarantines, a remote location scouting system was used in some instances, in which scouts were sent to prospective areas with a camera to broadcast the sites to Mangold and production designer Adam Stockhausen.^{[126][127]}

Principal photography began in England on June 4, 2021.^[128] Sound stage filming took place at Pinewood Studios,^{[129][130]} and on-site filming locations included Bamburgh Castle and the North Yorkshire Moors Railway near Grosmont.^{[131][132]} The latter locations were used for the opening sequence,^[23] including a train chase and a motorcycle scene involving Ford's stunt double.^{[128][133][134]} Ford himself was spotted in Grosmont on June 7, 2021.^{[135][136]} The railway bridge scenes were filmed in mid-June 2021, at Leaderfoot Viaduct near Melrose in the Scottish Borders.^{[137][138]} The train's interior design was inspired by Hitler's personal train, the Führersonderzug,^[126] and the interior scenes were filmed on a set at Pinewood Studios.^[23]

A motorcycle chase was shot in the Scottish village of Glencoe,^[139] and other Scottish locations included Biggar, South Lanarkshire.^[140] Later in June, location shooting moved to London, where a street in Hackney was lined with vintage cars. Filming also took place inside a private residence that was reportedly chosen for its period-style interior. Ford preferred to do his own stunts.^[141] On June 23, it was announced that he had injured his shoulder during the rehearsal of a fight scene and that the production crew would shoot around his recovery.^[142] Ford's injury occurred while rehearsing a punch against Mikkelsen's character for the train sequence.^[143]

A ticker-tape parade for the Apollo 11 astronauts in New York City on August 13, 1969

Recreation of the parade for filming in Glasgow, July 15, 2021

In July 2021,^[144] shooting moved to Glasgow's city centre, which was transformed to resemble New York City in 1969.^{[145][146]} Meticulous detail went into efforts to recreate the location and time period.^{[147][148]} A chase sequence, shot along St. Vincent Street and other areas, re-creates a ticker tape parade celebrating the return of the Apollo 11

astronauts.^{[146][149][150]} A stunt double, Mike Massa, performed in place of Ford throughout the Glasgow shoot,^{[151][152]} with motion capture markers applied to his face.^[153] Holbrook and Waller-Bridge were on set as well.^[154] The sequence also featured 1,000 background actors as parade-goers and Vietnam War protesters.^[23] Filming in Glasgow lasted two weeks.^{[155][156]} Ford resumed filming in September 2021,^[157] and some shooting took place in the Hatton Garden area of London, which also doubled as New York City.^{[133][138]} In addition, a replica of a New York City Subway station was built at Pinewood's 007 Stage.^{[23][148]}

In October 2021, production moved to Sicily, Italy,^{[158][159][160]} after the ending between Ford and Allen was shot.^[161] The Italian shoot included nearly 600 crew members,^[162] and took place throughout Sicily, which stood in for itself and Greece.^[23] Filming began in the city of Syracuse.^{[162][163]} Other shooting locations included the city of Cefalù, often standing in for Syracuse,^{[138][162][164]} and the Province of Trapani.^[165] Filming in Trapani included the towns of Marsala^[166] and Castellammare del Golfo,^[167] the latter serving as the harbor where Renaldo meets with Jones.^{[160][168]} Mangold wanted to include an underwater treasure-hunting sequence, a first for the film series.^[169] The diving scenes were filmed on-location in the Mediterranean Sea and in a tank at Pinewood, the latter done with stunt performers.^[170]

The sequence involving Archimedes' tomb was filmed at Pinewood.^[138] The scenes leading up to the tomb sequence were shot at the Temple of Segesta in Trapani,^{[138][171]} as well as the Neapolis archaeological park in Syracuse.^[166] Filming at the latter location included the Ear of Dionysius cave,^{[172][173][174]} and the Grotta Dei Cordari cave.^[166] Scenes depicting the Roman siege were shot in Sicily as well,^{[175][176][177]} including Castello Maniace in Syracuse.^{[160][168][178]}

Filming began in Morocco on October 17, 2021,^{[179][180]} taking place in the cities of Fez and Oujda.^[138] The Morocco segment was originally set to film in India – specifically the cities of Jaisalmer and Jaipur^[127] in the state of Rajasthan – until the COVID-19 levels there increased.^{[181][127][182]} Kathmandu in Nepal was then considered, until an outbreak occurred there as well.^[127] The Moroccan shoot consisted of exterior filming,^[23] while the interiors of the Hotel L'Atlantique were recreated at Pinewood.^{[23][138]} The Tangier chase sequence required the use of a dozen tuk-tuks,^{[23][183]} and was shot in Fez primarily by a second unit crew, while the actors filmed their portions of the sequence later on at Pinewood,^{[181][127]} with the use of a blue screen.^[184] On November 4, a camera operator named Nic Cupac was found dead in his Morocco hotel room; Disney stated that his death was not production related.^[185]

After Morocco, the remainder of filming took place at Pinewood,^{[130][181]} eventually wrapping on February 26, 2022.^{[186][187]} Post-production began nine days later, although some film editing had already taken place while shooting.^[188] Michael McCusker, Andrew Buckland and Dirk Westervelt served as the film editors, replacing Michael Kahn, who had edited the previous four films.^[189] Phedon Papamichael served as cinematographer, marking his sixth film with Mangold.^[190] Papamichael sought advice from Spielberg's longtime cinematographer Janusz Kamiński, who worked on Crystal Skull.^[191] Spielberg offered his advice on the script, watched dailies,^{[80][192]} and later visited the editing room a number of times.^[85] He praised the finished film.^[193]

Visual effects

As with the previous films, visual effects were handled by Industrial Light & Magic (ILM), a division of Lucasfilm. Dial of Destiny has a total of 2,350 effects shots, including many that occur during the Syracuse siege sequence.^[170] The time fissure, depicted as a stormy cloud portal, was made entirely through computer-generated imagery (CGI) and was among the final effects created for the film. The fissure design was based on research conducted into real cloud formations, as Mangold wanted it to look natural.^[194]

In addition to ILM, several other visual effects companies also worked on the film and spent more than a year in post-production. After ILM, Rising Sun Pictures was the second-largest contributor of visual effects; it handled 301 shots, most of them during the parade sequence. Important Looking Pirates worked on 250 shots, mostly for the underwater sequence.^[195] Soho VFX contributed 235 shots, most of them for the tuk-tuk chase sequence. The Hotel L'Atlantique exterior was also created by Soho through CGI.^[184]

De-aging

Spielberg used motion capture for his animated film The Adventures of Tintin (2011), although he rejected the idea of using this method to digitally de-age Ford, saying in 2012 that he wanted the actor's age to be acknowledged in the film.^[196] By mid-2019, Spielberg and Koepp had devised a five-minute World War II opening sequence that would feature a de-aged Ford. Upon taking over the project, Mangold expanded the sequence to roughly 25 minutes.^[76]

More than 100 ILM artists worked on the opening sequence over a three-year period, using various methods.^[197] Ford was de-aged to depict his appearance during the first three Indiana Jones films. This was partly achieved using new artificial intelligence software from ILM, which looked through archived footage of a younger Ford in his previous work for Lucasfilm,^{[198][199][200]} including the original Star Wars films.^[170] Ford's head was also scanned to create a younger version using CGI.^[197] Lighting techniques were emphasized on-set and included the use of Flux, a light-based capture system previously used for de-aging scenes in The Irishman (2019).^[200] In addition to effects, a mask of Ford's younger face was also made for use by a stuntman during a motorcycle chase.^[201]

After filming, the de-aging footage was modified shot-by-shot using a variety of techniques.^{[200][194]} ILM artists had particular difficulty getting Ford's eyes to look right. According to visual effects supervisor Robert Weaver, "Many times, we weren't quite getting the right balance of the eye-opening and the shape of the overall eyes, and were continually having to reference both older footage and what was shot in camera."^[202] Ford was somewhat "spooked" by the de-aging process, but was nonetheless impressed.^{[198][203]} Mikkelsen was also de-aged for the opening sequence.^{[194][204]}

Music

In June 2016, Spielberg confirmed that John Williams, who scored the previous films in the Indiana Jones franchise, would return to compose the music for the fifth film.^[205] In 2022, Williams stated that it would be his final film score, following plans for a retirement,^[206] though he later backtracked on this decision.^[207] Williams premiered one of his compositions, "Helena's Theme", at the Hollywood Bowl on September 2, 2022, at Mangold's request.^[110] Walt Disney Records released the soundtrack album digitally on June 29, 2023, and physically through CD and vinyl LP formats on August 9, 2023.^{[208][209]}

Dial of Destiny also features several songs not included on the album release, including The Beatles' "Magical Mystery Tour" (attributed to the Lennon–McCartney partnership in the credits), David Bowie's "Space Oddity". and "La Fogaraccia" from Nino Rota's score for the 1973 Federico Fellini film Amarcord.^[210]

Themes and influences

Ford and Mangold both felt that Crystal Skull did not do enough to highlight Jones' age and the new era in which he lives.^{[48][76]} Speaking about Dial of Destiny as a finale to the franchise, Mangold said, "It became really important to me to figure out how to make this a movie about a hero at sunset". He said that Jones's age would be a major part of the film, something that was touched upon only briefly in the earlier drafts: "The issues I brought up about Indy's age were not things I thought were being addressed in the material being developed at the time. There were 'old' jokes, but the material itself wasn't about it. To me, whatever your greatest liability, you should fly straight towards that. If you try to pretend it's not there, you end up getting slings and arrows the whole way".^[47] According to Mangold and Ford, Dial of Destiny is about age, time and family relationships.^{[211][85]} Mangold said the film "is not about aging per se, but time — the way time travels for all of us, the way we all get older as the world changes around us".^[85]

Mangold said of the film's cinematic style that the opening sequence, set in 1944, is meant to contrast with the main plot, which takes place in 1969, allowing the film to start with a blast of classic Indiana Jones action reminiscent of the first three films (1981–1989). The transition from the pulpy cinematic language of 1940s films brings the characters from an "older world" into the "modern" 1960s, a present strongly influenced by the Cold War, nuclear power, space travel, intrigue and the lack of black-and-white morality. Mangold sought to portray "an accurate and realistic appraisal of where this character would be at this time in his life", describing Jones as "a hero who is used to a black and white world" when it comes to villains, who now finds himself in a gray world with a lack of "clear good guys and bad guys".^[10] Jez Butterworth noted the presence of ex-Nazis involved in the U.S. government's Moon-landing program.^[21] This makes

Jones grow distrustful of his country, feeling like a man out of time in an era in which idealism is gone.^{[21][10]} It was Ford's idea to start the 1969 storyline with Jones at a low point in his life, and then gradually "rebuild him from the ground up" as the film progresses.^[212]

Mangold compared Dial of Destiny to his final X-Men film Logan, enjoying the notion of what a hero can do for the world when it no longer has a place for him, allowing classical heroes to be seen through the "prism" of today's "jaundiced contemporary attitudes". However, Dial of Destiny would lack the seriousness of Logan, with the latter being regarded as a "purposefully and intentionally" grim adventure.^[10]

Release

Marketing

During Star Wars Celebration in May 2022, Ford debuted the first official image from the film, showing Jones silhouetted in a cave.^{[213][214]} Exclusive footage was shown to attendees at the D23 Expo in September 2022.^[215] The footage included shots of a de-aged Ford and multiple action sequences, and confirmed the return of Rhys-Davies.^[117] The film's title, Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny, was revealed on December 1, 2022, alongside the first trailer for the film.^[14] The Escapist's John Friscia found the trailer's nod to Raiders of the Lost Ark amusing but hoped that the film wouldn't rely on nostalgia.^[216] A TV spot for the film aired during Super Bowl LVII on February 12, 2023.^[217] A new trailer and poster debuted at the 2023 Star Wars Celebration on April 7, 2023.^{[218][219][220]}

Theatrical

Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny had its world premiere at the 76th Cannes Film Festival, screening out-of-competition, on May 18, 2023,^[221] exactly fifteen years after the Cannes premiere of The Kingdom of the Crystal Skull. The film received a "lukewarm" five-minute standing ovation^[222] and received a divisive reaction from attending critics.^[223] It was theatrically released in the United States on June 30, 2023, by Walt Disney Studios Motion Pictures in IMAX, Dolby Cinema, 4DX, ScreenX, and other premium formats.^[224] It was initially set for release on July 19, 2019,^{[51][225]} taking off the then-planned release date for the Marvel Cinematic Universe unproduced Inhumans film by Marvel Studios,^[226] but was delayed in April 2017 to July 10, 2020, with The Lion King (2019) taking its former spot.^[61] It then shifted to July 9, 2021,^[67] and was further delayed to July 29, 2022, following the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the film industry.^[227] Its current release date was announced in October 2021.^[228] Internationally, the film was released on dates ranging from June 28 to 30.^{[229][230][231]}

Home media

Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny was released on digital formats on August 29, 2023.^[232] The film achieved first place on VOD charts, topping iTunes, Google Play, and Vudu.^[233] Dial of Destiny was released on Disney+ on December 1, 2023 and was released on DVD, Blu-ray, and 4K by Walt Disney

Reception

Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny grossed $174.5 million in the United States and Canada, and $209.5 million in other territories, for a worldwide total of $384 million.^{[235][236]} With an estimated production budget of $294.7 million, not including marketing costs, it is the most expensive film in the Indiana Jones franchise, as well as one of the most expensive films ever made.^{[133][237]} Due to its expensive production cost and marketing budget, the film was deemed a box-office bomb.^{[238][239]} Collider estimated the film would need to make around $600 million to break-even, and $800 million to be considered a success.^[240] The film lost Disney an estimated $143 million,^{[241][242]} making it one of the company's largest financial film failures since John Carter (2012).^[243]

In the United States and Canada, Dial of Destiny was released alongside Ruby Gillman, Teenage Kraken, and was projected to gross domestically $60–65 million from 4,600 theaters in its opening weekend. It was also expected to gross around $80 million from international territories, for a worldwide debut of around $140 million.^[244] TheWrap claimed that Americans under the age of 30 had a "much lower presence in ticket presales compared to the average summer tentpole" and that the film's tracking was also underperforming in Asian markets.^[245] The film made $24 million on its first day,^[246] including $7.2 million from Thursday night previews.^[247] It went on to debut to $60.4 million over the three-day weekend,^[248] the second-best total of the franchise (not adjusted for inflation), behind its predecessor Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull (2008), and a total of $83.9 million over the five-day Independence Day holiday,^[249] finishing first at the box office;^{[250][251]} Deadline Hollywood noted that a majority of the opening weekend audience (58%) was over the age of 35.^[5] The film made $26.5 million in its second weekend, finishing in second behind newcomer Insidious: The Red Door; the 56.1% drop was the largest of the franchise.^[252] The film made $12 million in its third weekend and $6.7 million in its fourth, finishing in fourth and fifth place, respectively.^{[253][254]}

Overseas, the film made $69.6 million from 52 countries in its opening weekend. The largest markets were the United Kingdom ($8.9 million), France ($5.9 million), Japan ($4.7 million), Korea ($4.1 million), Germany ($4.1 million), Spain ($4 million), Australia ($3.8 million), Italy ($2.7 million), China ($2.3 million), and Mexico ($2.3 million).^[255] Variety said that the lukewarm critical and audience response to the film was in-part to blame for the "weak opening", and noted its global debut of $130 million was less than The Flash's $139 million opening two weeks prior.^[256]

Critical response

On the review aggregator website Rotten Tomatoes, 70% of 419 critics' reviews are positive, with an average rating of 6.4/10. The website's consensus reads: "It isn't as thrilling as earlier adventures, but the nostalgic rush of seeing Harrison Ford back in action helps Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny find a few final bits of cinematic treasure."^[257] Metacritic, which uses a weighted average, assigned the film a score of 58 out of 100, based on 65 critics, indicating "mixed or average" reviews.^[258] Audiences polled by CinemaScore gave the film an average grade of "B+" on an A+ to F scale, slightly above the previous film's B score, while PostTrak reported a 79% positive score from filmgoers, with 59% saying they would definitely recommend the film.^[5]

John Nugent of Empire gave the film four out of five stars, complimenting Ford's performance, and noted Mangold's camerawork "moves confidently through action set-piece after action set-piece, keeping up a frantic pace."^[259] Bilge Ebiri, reviewing for Vulture, called the film "fun" but acknowledged comparisons to the previous installments were "warranted. But it's also too entertaining to dismiss. You may not lose yourself in this one the way so many of us once did with the earlier Indiana Jones movies, but you'll certainly have a good time."^[260] The Guardian's Peter Bradshaw felt Dial of Destiny "has quite a bit of zip and fun and narrative ingenuity with all its MacGuffiny silliness that the last one really didn't."^[261] Germain Lussier, reviewing the film for io9, praised the film for having "a great premise, exciting action, wonderful banter, and some fantastic twists and turns."^[262] In Uproxx, Mike Ryan wrote: "This is a very fun movie but Indy's arc is poignant and also sad. It's kept in the background, but it's there." He found the ending more satisfying than the ending of The Kingdom of the Crystal Skull.^[263]

Owen Gleiberman of Variety described the film as a "dutifully eager but ultimately rather joyless piece of nostalgic hokum minus the thrill... Though it has its quota of 'relentless' action, it rarely tries to match (let alone top) the ingeniously staged kinetic bravura of Raiders of the Lost Ark ... time travel, in Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny, is really an unconscious metaphor, since it's the movie that wants to go back in time, completing our love affair with the defining action-movie-star role of Harrison Ford. In the abstract, at least, it accomplishes that, right down to the emotional diagram of a touching finale, but only by reminding you that even if you re-stage the action ethos of the past, recapturing the thrill is much harder."^[25] David Rooney for The Hollywood Reporter criticized the film, writing "it's a big, bombastic movie that goes through the motions but never finds much joy in the process, despite John Williams's hard-working score continuously pushing our nostalgia buttons and trying to convince us we're on a wild ride."^[264] The Telegraph's Robbie Collin praised Ford's performance, but felt the film's action sequences were "loaded with mayhem but painfully short on spark and bravado: there's no shot here, nor twist of choreography, that makes you marvel at the filmmaking mind that conceived it."^[265] Richard Lawson of Vanity Fair wrote: "Dial of Destiny certainly tries hard to do right by its pedigree. The basic component parts are there: an object quest rooted in history, a tingle of the supernatural, easily rooted-against fascist villains. But something in the calculations is off ...In [the film], one can feel the four credited screenwriters grasping at inspiration and coming up short. What they did manage to make would be perfectly fine as a standalone adventure film starring some other character, but it's not worthy of the whip."^[266]

Accolades

The trailer for Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny was nominated in three categories at the 2023 Golden Trailer Awards: Best Summer 2023 Blockbuster Trailer, and Best Teaser; and "Hero" (Wild Card) for Best Fantasy Adventure TV Spot (for a Feature Film) and Best Music TV Spot (for a Feature Film). It won Best Fantasy Adventure for "New Day" (Wild Card) and Best Fantasy Adventure TV Spot (for a Feature Film) for "Hero" (Wild Card).^{[267][268]}

Future

Disney CEO Bob Iger said in 2016 that the future of the franchise with Ford was unknown, but that the fifth film would not be the final installment in the franchise.^[282] In 2022, Kennedy reaffirmed earlier comments that Ford's role as Indiana Jones would not be recast,^[283] while Ford confirmed that the fifth film would be his last in the series.^[215] That November, Disney considered multiple options to continue the franchise, including additional films or a television series for Disney+. By March 2023, Lucasfilm was reported to have canceled Indiana Jones movies and television series because they want to focus on the Star Wars franchise;^[284] it would have been the second prequel series following The Young Indiana Jones Chronicles.^[285] Disney confirmed the following month that the film would indeed be the last in the franchise.^[286]
